keep it serviced throughout winter to protect the pool and plantroom

For best performance, your pool should be serviced all year round. Without ongoing care during the winter months you run the risk of the plant and equipment such as boilers, pumps and filters becoming damaged.

Closing the pool correctly at the start of the winter season involves draining water and equipment and covering the pool with a winter cover. These steps will protect your pool from sub-zero temperatures, debris, rain and wind.

But contrary to popular belief that's not enough. Your pool needs servicing throughout the winter to protect the water chemistry and prevent all manner of debris from drifting into the pool and clogging up the system. - At a minimum, have fortnightly servicing - means issues are picked up before they become time consuming problems
- If you spot anything untoward outside of a servicing visit, report it immediately – avoids extra servicing time/expense and swimming down time
- Cover your pool whenever it's not in use - saves energy and expense
- All bathers should take a quick shower before swimming to avoid body oil getting in the water - reduces the amount of chemical use
- When you're finished in the pool remove any toys or swimming aids – prevents items getting lodged in places like the skimmer
- Little and often' avoids trouble! Happy swimming and I look forward to working with you to ensure you get years of pleasure from your swimming pool and spa.
